

Meet the Artist

Carol Kraco

"I have had an interest in photography since I received my first Konica at the age of 15. I developed my eye over many years, photographing nature, architecture, and eventually my own children. It wasn't until I was taking photographs at a vintage car show in the summer of 2009 that I realized what I did was unique.

The advent of digital film has made photography accessible to many, but an understanding of composition and form is still what separates art from the ordinary. Trying to capture the right image at the right moment to preserve it so others may see it as I do is my goal. There is so much beauty in the world in places both unexpected and obvious, and I work every day to preserve them with my work."
