To My Clients:

As we try to move forward from two years of disruption, we are faced with new challenges, including geopolitical turmoil with the Russia/Ukraine conflict. As the saying goes, “life is just one (darned) thing after another.” Try not to get too consumed by the news of the present. Markets are often quick to react, but bad news almost never supersedes the power of true patience.

Here's to warmer and smoother days ahead. Remember that I am here to help.

– Kairas

The Return to “Normal”

Volatility has returned to the equity markets. For investors, it may feel particularly unsettling considering that extended periods of volatility haven't been seen for some time. Yet, after over two years of disruption, consider that the return to “normal” is expected to take time and there will be the inevitable bumps along the way.

As we move forward, the central banks continue to be in the spotlight. Whether or not you agree with the significant stimulus action taken over the past two years, it has helped to avert more serious financial and economic harm. However, central bankers are now confronted with the complicated task of winding down their support in the return to normal: increasing interest rates to more “normal” levels and reducing balance sheet assets after their aggressive bond- buying programs. Adding to the current challenges? Higher and sustained levels of inflation, which have largely been supported by ongoing supply chain disruptions — and, more recently, global geopolitical tensions with the Russia/Ukraine war.

Financial markets are often quick to react to these uncertainties and, with the many changes, volatility can be expected. Yet, while there are inevitable challenges, don't listen to the doomsayers who suggest that they are insurmountable. Not to belittle the unique challenges we face today, but history reminds us that every market period has had its own obstacles that make it difficult to assess future prospects. Market pessimists have always been quick to offer their prognostications. Consider that over the past 50 years:

- Annual inflation exceeded 5 percent in 13 of those years.¹
- The stock market fell in more than 241 of those 600 months, or 40 percent of the time.²
- The stock market lost a quarter of its value at least seven times.²
- There were eight bear markets lasting a total of 77 months.²
- We had six recessions, cumulatively lasting almost six years.³

And, yet, over this period the equity markets, as measured by the S&P/TSX Composite Index, appreciated by over six percent on an annualized basis (not including reinvested dividends).²

Having a longer-term view reminds us that the markets have continued to progress over time, despite the many short-term uncertainties: credit and debt crises, recessions, war and many changing policies by central banks. During these times, don't lose sight of your own financial goals: patience, alongside careful monitoring and prudent adjustments through my support, should stand you in good stead.

For many of us, it may feel as though there has been little respite from the challenges faced over the past two years. As we move into spring — quite fittingly referred to as the season of renewal — we are all looking forward to a return to normal.

It's Tax Season Once Again: Ways to Be Tax Savvy

This time of year, income taxes are naturally on our minds. Many of us feel we pay too much tax. There are actions we can take to help minimize these liabilities, which may be even more important in these times of high inflation. Here are some ideas:

Consider the Support of a Tax Professional

The support of accounting or tax professionals may be beneficial to ensure your tax planning accounts for the most updated rules or to help prevent costly mistakes, such as incorrectly completing tax returns or neglecting to claim tax credits. It may also be helpful in more complicated situations, such as where a divorce is involved or if you hold a significant portfolio of foreign assets. As we grow older, it can provide continuity from year to year, which may be important in the event of health issues, incapacity or the death of a spouse.

Remember: The Tax Rules Continue to Evolve

The tax landscape continues to evolve. One example is the array of Covid-related benefits introduced over the past two years. Since the start of 2022, the Canada Revenue Agency (CRA) has announced tax changes that may impact certain tax positions. While these changes may not apply to personal income tax season, they are examples of the evolving landscape:

- Work-from-Home Tax Credit — As with the 2020 tax year, the CRA has again issued a simplified Form T2200 available to taxpayers for both the 2021 and 2022 tax years and has allowed a claim for up to $500 of home expenses.
- Automobile Deduction Allowance — For 2022, the limit on the deduction of tax-exempt allowances paid to employees who use personal vehicles for business purposes has increased by $0.02, to $0.61/km for the first 5,000 km driven and $0.55/km thereafter for all provinces. Mileage rates were last raised in 2020.¹
- Expanded Trust Reporting — Expanded annual reporting requirements for trusts were anticipated for the 2021 tax year, but in the first quarter of this year the government confirmed that this was still pending. Draft legislation is expected to be passed for trusts with taxation years ending after Dec. 30, 2022.

- A Pending Luxury Tax? — The 2021 federal budget proposed a luxury tax that did not come into effect starting 2022. Draft legislation is expected,² but at the time of writing has yet to be introduced. The proposed levy is either 10 percent of the purchase value above a certain threshold ($100,000 for new cars/aircraft; $250,000 for boats) or 20 percent of the full value, whichever is less.

Make Tax Planning a Year-Round Exercise

Year-round tax planning can start with maximizing tax-advantaged accounts like Tax-Free Savings Accounts (TFSAs) or Registered Retirement Savings Plans (RRSPs). It may include adjusting asset location as investment returns — bond interest, Canadian and foreign stock dividends, capital gains — may be taxed differently depending upon where they are held, i.e., RRSP, TFSA or non-registered accounts. When it comes to your wealth plan, we're here to discuss tax-planning opportunities to help you keep more of your hard-earned dollars.

Put Your Potential Refund to Work

If you receive a tax refund, what will you do with it? Each year, 19 million Canadians receive a refund averaging $1,801.³ Yet, only 18 percent plan to invest it in a RRSP, RESP or TFSA.⁴ Consider the potential upside: investing this amount each year for the next 25 years at an annual rate of return of 5.5 percent would yield almost $100,000 in that time.⁵

Plan Ahead: Four Things You May Not Know About the RRIF

While RRSP season may be over, if you have yet to reach retirement, consider the value in thinking ahead to the time when you will eventually access these funds. Here are four things you may not know about the Registered Retirement Income Fund (RRIF).

1. You can convert the RRSP to the RRIF earlier than age 71. The RRSP matures by the end of the calendar year in which the holder turns age 71 and is often converted to a RRIF at that time. However, you are able to open a RRIF earlier than this age. Minimum withdrawal payments will still be required, but not until the calendar year following the year that the RRIF account is opened.

2. You can hold the RRSP and RRIF at the same time. While the RRIF is usually used by an investor to transfer funds once the RRSP matures, there may be instances in which you may want both. If you need to generate pension income to take advantage of the federal pension income tax credit, you could consider opening a small RRIF at the age of 65. At the same time, you can still continue operating your RRSP to capture the ongoing tax deductions from your contributions. Consider also that you can notionally split up to 50 percent of your eligible pension income (which includes RRIF income from age 65) with a spouse (or common-law partner).

3. You are able to convert the RRIF back to the RRSP. If you've converted funds to the RRIF earlier than age 71 and realize that it's no longer to your benefit, you are able to convert it back. You may decide to do an early conversion if you retire early, take a sabbatical or have an extended leave from work, since the loss of income means you may be in a lower tax bracket or you may need funds. However, if you return to work, it may be beneficial to resume the RRSP.

4. You can base RRIF withdrawals on a spouse's age. If you have a younger spouse, it may be useful to use their age to result in a lower minimum withdrawal rate for your RRIF. Be aware that this must be done when first setting up the RRIF and before you have received any payments, so plan ahead.

Spring Cleaning? Start with Your Registered Plan Beneficiaries

When was the last time you reviewed your registered plan beneficiary designations? We often forget to revisit these designations after opening our accounts. However, failing to update beneficiaries is a common and potentially costly retirement and estate planning error that many investors make.

Here are some steps you can take to spring clean your beneficiary designations, as it relates to your registered plan accounts:

Create a list of your investment accounts. Then identify which accounts permit beneficiary designations, such as your Registered Retirement Savings Plan (RRSP), Registered Retirement Income Fund (RRIF) and Tax-Free Savings Account (TFSA), including any accounts through your employer.

List the beneficiaries you have named for each account.

Determine if the named beneficiary is still current. It is possible that a named beneficiary is no longer alive, or perhaps a major life event, like divorce, has changed the status of an existing beneficiary. Be sure to revisit beneficiary designations following major life changes.

Consider whether a beneficiary should even be named. If no beneficiary is named, assets will pass through your estate. In some cases, a beneficiary is named instead of the estate to avoid probate fees.¹ While this may be ideal for tax-planning purposes, it can inadvertently create other issues. For example, if an adult non-dependent child was named as the RRIF beneficiary, the value of the RRIF will be paid directly to them, but the tax burden will fall back to the deceased's estate, unless a provision has been made in the will. This may cause unintended estate equalization issues.

If a spouse (common-law partner) has been named, determine if there are additional considerations.

If a spouse is named as beneficiary for a TFSA or RRIF, you also have the option of naming them as “successor holder” or “successor annuitant,” respectively. Generally, the successor designation permits the continued operation of the account by the surviving spouse relatively seamlessly. For the TFSA, any income earned after your death would not be taxed. For the RRIF, there would be no tax consequences to your estate.

Seek assistance. We are here to assist with any changes to your beneficiary designations on your registered plan accounts. As you review these beneficiary designations, we recommend considering the support of estate planning and legal advisors to help ensure your estate planning objectives will be met.

Helping to Protect Investors: The Trusted Contact Person (TCP)

Protecting the financial security of investors has never been more important. With a growing elderly population and our ever-increasing dependence on technology, there has been a rise in cybercrimes.

Fact: Over 46 percent of individuals who are 60 years and older have physical and mental disabilities.¹

Fact: Each year, one in six seniors falls victim to elder abuse.²

Fact: Regardless of age, we remain vulnerable to financial fraud and economic abuse. Canadians lost $380M to fraud in 2021 alone.³

With these increasing challenges, the “trusted contact person” (TCP) has been introduced to provide an additional preventative layer of protection to support investors. The TCP is a person you choose, for which you have given us written consent to contact under certain circumstances, such as if there appears to be something amiss, if there is suspected financial exploitation or if there are concerns about decision making.

The TCP has no authority to make financial decisions or direct transactions and assumes no liability when it comes to your account(s). The TCP does not replace or assume the role of Trading Authority that may be authorized to an investment account. As well, the TCP is different from the Power of Attorney role that is put in place to provide support in the event of incapacity.

You are able to appoint anyone you wish to be your trusted contact person. It is recommended to select someone who is trusted, mature and knowledgeable about your personal situation and support network. The individual should be capable of speaking with you, and to us, about your well-being, including potentially sensitive topics such as your physical or mental health status.

You may also consider appointing multiple trusted contacts. The person(s) nominated can change and you are able to revoke designations entirely at any time.

While there may not be a current need for a TCP, implementing this safeguard in advance can help to provide protection down the road. Even if you have appointed a Power of Attorney, having a TCP adds an additional layer of protection to your account(s). If you would like to nominate a TCP for your existing accounts, or for more information, please get in touch.

Finding Ways to Deal with Inflation

As the theme of inflation continues to dominate the financial headlines, investors may be wondering what steps can be taken to combat rising prices.

Higher inflation has been more persistent than many expected, largely driven by the anomalies of the pandemic — most significantly on the supply side, due to supply chain and labour market issues still lingering from the economic shutdowns. We may now be facing continued headwinds as a result of the conflict in Europe.

Consider, also, that inflationary expectations can help to drive inflation.¹ Perhaps the most extreme case in recent times belongs to Zimbabwe. People were so accustomed to expecting higher inflation that it became somewhat self-fulfilling. In 2009, Zimbabwe's inflation rate hit 230,000,000 percent. Prices would change by the minute, but the country kept printing money. At the height of their economic problems, they issued a one hundred trillion dollar bill — the largest denominated note ever circulated. When the Zimbabwean dollar was abandoned as the official currency, the hundred trillion dollar bill was only worth about US$0.40.²

Of course, we don't expect similar hyperinflation. It is likely that inflationary pressures will temper as things return to normal. However, there's little dispute that inflation is here, at least for the short run, so consider these ways to help deal with inflation.

Don't overlook the merits of being invested. History has shown that over longer time periods (and even despite short-term volatility), equity market returns outperform inflation.³ This is a good reminder of the merits of staying invested. Now may be a great time to review your finances: do you have available contribution room in a TFSA or RRSP, or funds sitting idle that could be invested to benefit your future?

Better tax planning may help put funds back into your hands. Inflation is often referred to as the “silent tax.” As such, why not consider tax planning exercises to help put funds back into your hands? It is personal income tax season — an opportunity to get organized and avoid overlooking important deductions or savings on your tax return. Tax planning should be a year-round exercise: there may be opportunities for income-splitting with a spouse, contributing to tax-advantaged accounts, or planning for a small business.

Consider a budget (or help others!). A budget may be especially helpful for those on fixed incomes, such as seniors or younger folks just starting out. It can help to provide a full picture of inflows and outflows, and determine which costs are necessary and what adjustments can be made to account for any increases from inflation. Ironically, the calculation of the official measure of inflation, the CPI, doesn't include such items as gasoline and groceries, everyday living expenses incurred by almost everyone — and for which costs have gone up significantly.

In Jest: A Parting Thought

If you want to become an instant “trillionaire,” you can buy the Zimbabwean note on eBay. The irony is that the one hundred trillion dollar bill is worth more today than when it was in circulation: around US$200, which represents a whopping “appreciation” of about 61 percent per year since 2009 and certainly one that has surpassed inflation!
